

Expert Project Assignment #8

Thursday, November 1, 2018

This week:

I. Revise your proposals. Review your teacher comments and revise your proposal as needed. Turn in a copy of your revised proposal.

II. This week we start the note-taking process.

--Use your questions to guide your note-taking. At this point it makes sense to gather answers to "little thinking" questions, but keep those "more" and "most" thinking questions on hand.

--Have your sub-topic list handy; focus on one or two of your sub-topics.

--Stick with resources you have already reviewed and tabbed.

A. Use the note-taking format we talked about in class.

Remember...

- ❖ Write one fact/idea per card.
- ❖ Include the resource number, which should be listed on your working bibliography.
- ❖ Include the page number of the resource.
- ❖ Write neatly.
- ❖ Be sure you spell proper names correctly.
- ❖ Write the information in your own words. If you ever copy something word for word, you must put it in quotation marks to remind yourself that you borrowed someone else's language.

Write 20-30 note cards. Bundle your cards into a rubber band.

Fill out the information on the back of this sheet and turn it in with your notecards.

How to Write an Information Card

This is the sub-topic you are researching.

This is the number of the resource where the information was found

Oral Tradition	3
Oral tradition means storytelling. It is one way we know what happened in the past. Stories can tell us what the people of that culture valued.

This is the page number where the information was found

Oral Tradition	3
The early history was kept alive during the Dark Age (1100-800 BC) by oral tradition. Poets went from town to town and recited, from memory, the stories of Greece's past.

Write information in your own words.

Oral Tradition	3
Since the stories weren't written down, they often changed from telling to telling.

One card, one idea.
This way you have the most flexibility when you organize your cards for drafts.
